SCSC BUYS FERRARI

By Joe College

Rumours were quelled late yesterday when George Nutter, Speaker of the Council, mumbled that the Student's Council had finalized the purchase of a 1982 red Ferrari Mondial for president Ted Grinstead. A spokesman for the speaker (by this time laughing so hard while trying to picture Ted driving this thing), stated that the purchase was to keep Ted happy with his fast paced life. "We simply had to get his feet moving as fast as his jaws...and this was the only way we could do it while keeping up the Council's quality image."

The purchase, although it will bolster student morale (see look what we can do with your money!), has had its drawbacks. SCSC bookkeeper, Kay Kelman, is slightly perturbed at this latest move. According to Kelman, the Council hasn't got the bookkeeping facilities for this type of purchase. "We've never bought anything that's had as many zeroes in it.. including the guy who's going to drive it," she said, as she hurled her 4-digit calculator against the wall.

SCSC vice-president Kelvin Sealey was hesitant about making the purchase, but when he was informed that his name would be embroidered on the passenger seat, and that he could drive if Ted wasn't looking, he abruptly changed his position, asking for an engraved set of keys for his own personal use.

Finance Commissioner Tom Shoniker also released a statement explaining the financing involved. "The car had a list price of $80,000, and I managed to talk to guy down to $72,000. It might seem expensive to all of you, but look, I saved $8,000. And then I went out and bought $8,000 worth of cigarettes, but we haven't paid for the cigareetes yet, so we've really save $16,000 so far. But then when we sell the cigarettes, we make a profit, so now we're up to an $18,000 saving. So when you put that towards the car, we've already saved $26,000, I think."

The pit crew and mechanical team are comprised of the dynamic Bill Carey and the almost dynamic Martin Snead. Both positions may be in doubt, however. It seems that Carey continually insists on plastering the sides with advertisements, and Snead is suffering from migraines because he's never had a high-pressure job like this in his life.

The Council's Secretary/Receptionist, Sue Gatenby, is taking the whole thing very well. "I told them a Mercedes would be more suitable, but then, what do Germans know about cars".

For those of you that wish to see the car, forget it. Each person on the council has it for one day each. After the inaugural one-month trials the car will be kept under lock and key, away from any silly students who might want to look at their car.

Library Update:

By Hat Molland

Yesterday, the administration announced that the Library Building Fund has run out of money and that all new fund-raising avenues have been exhausted.

There have been long, heated discussions of what to do about this predicament. It was finally decided to see if other purposes could be found for the almost finished building. After such valiant attempts such as making into a new Balcony Square office (we couldn't talk Grinstead into signing the cheque) or using it to store the old printouts that are thrown away at the Computer Centre, an offer was made by SAC.

The Students' Administrative Council will pay for the rest of the construction, as well as refunding all the money that has been donated by students, individuals, governments, and corporations. They will then convert the building to be their new riding stables.

The location will give them better visibility on campus, as well as expand the stables in order to raise thoroughbred's, giving them additional revenue bases. However, since this will cost a lot of money until the horses start winning, the whole deal rests on a referendum to be held later this month, asking for a SAC fee increase from $10.75 to $123.95.

Important B.S. Meeting

for your information

Students For More Essays Club

There will be a meeting of the Students in Favour of More Essays Club in Room R-7867 on Thurs., at 3:00 Bullet proof vests should be worn.

SPEAKER:

Prof. B. O. Ring will be giving a speech on "Fashion and Manners of the Carriage Maker in 15th Century Bolivia" in the Meeting Place on Fri. at midnight.

Nominations are now being accepted for Commissioners on next year's Student's Council. Please submit names with list of influential friends. Any bribes will definitely be taken under consideration.

THE GALLERY:

There will be a display in the Gallery for the next 3 months of artwork by Grade 4 children from a Toronto Public School, done in the mid 1920's.

Study Skills Workshop

Make a New Year's Resolution to improve your marks, by coming to the following workshops sponsored by the Teaching-Learning-Grades Unit:

Exams: Tues. Feb. 2, 2-3 p.m. in Room R7227-How to use cheat notes, copying, and bribing invigilators.

Essays: Tues. Feb. 9, 2-3 p.m. in Room R0001-Where to buy good essays, how to get the best price, and how to camouflage them to look like your own.

Marks: Tues. Feb. 16, 2-5p.m. in Computer Centre-How to gain access to your marks in the computer, how to change class averages and bell curve the marks, and how to find confidential information about professors for blackmail purposes.

Post-Graduate Study

Applications are now being accepted for the Marquis de Sade School of Custom Upholstery, the spring session of which begins on Feb. 22 (Monday). Applications will be taken in Student Services Job Placement Office.

The Chemistry Club

The Chemistry Club will be showing a film on the creative uses of illicit hallucinogens. The film will be shown on no particular date in no specific place, so just "drop-in" whenever your time/space locale coincides with ours.

There will be a special screening of the banned version of Devo's video "Whip It" in the sex-ed centre. Be sure to see it with a person you love.

Lecture by SCSC Prez

Student Council President 'Grinnin' Ted Grinstead will be giving a lecture on handwriting analysis as soon as he can get a good fascimile of Principal Foley's signature on a room request form

The Case For Nuclear Holocaust

Quest Editorial: Dr. Strangelove

Mahood, London Times

"I can't see the objection to spraying people with napalm if it makes the world a better place to live in."

I would like to speak in favour of an idea that has been getting a lot of bad press lately, a nuclear holocaust.

There are many good reasons for having this event, far outweighing the bad ones. For example, the Toronto Star said that if the United States had a warning that Russia was going to fire a nuclear bomb at a major city, they could have an 80% survival rate. Just think, if we made a deal with Russia to provide warnings, we could move all the murderers, rapists, child molesters and student council reps to New York and that would cover our 20%. Think of how much better the world would be and how much money we could save on prisons (and duplicating services).

Preparing for an even as monumentous as this would help decrease unemployment. We would need more people to work on civilian defence, constructing bomb shelters, equipping them, and training doctors specializing in radiation deformities. It would stimulate the economy by encouraging people to buy enough to sustain them for months.

Another good point to consider is the easing of the housing crisis. When it was over there would be at least 20% less people (probably more, knowing how Reagan calculated the budget figures) to look for houses or apartments (if there are any left).

It must also be remembered that it would give a great boost to the slumping construction industry. Just think of the amount of reconstruction that would be needed to build up all the cities. Just think of all the ugly, old buildings that we could get rid of without having to worry about John Sewell and his buddies crying over them.

It would also alleviate any racial problems. Everyone would be so horribly deformed from the radiation that no one would be able to look at anyone else, so you won't know what race they are.

And, for the piece de resistance, it would promote peace. Once we get through this, it will take at least 50 years for scientists to come up with something to top this. No one would consider another nuclear attack, it would be passe. They would have to invent a new type of warfare, something never even considered before.

For these reasons, I think everyone should seriously consider my arguments and when you make up your minds to go along with my ideas, help me promote it and send letters to your MP and your local papers.

The Early Bird Clutches The Worm

By Darwin S. Esfinger

At a special meeting of the College Council, on January 15, the members voted 20-4 to have classes start at Scarborough a week before they end.

Classes will start April 2nd, the day after April Fools. The idea of the change was to make Scarborough a "wild and crazy" place, and eliminate problems that occurred this December. This year there was not study period between the end of classes, and the start of exams, and because the exams were crammed into eight days, there were more timetable conflicts. Next year, this problem will be alleviated by extending the exam period to ten days, and cancelling all of the exams.

First year student Phil McCavity, who put forward the motion was met by a standing ovation from the students and faculty present.

There was, of course, a debate. A number of problems were cited, said to be caused by this change: Registrarial difficulties, conflicts with exams held at the St. George campus, and the slight shortening of the summer break.

McCavity dismissed these problems as trivial, and added that if the motion were to be implemented, the difficulties in obtaining a summer job would be eliminated.

Kim McKerchar, the SCSC Communications Commissioner spoke in favour of the move, stating that today's ecologically-minded University students should be given the option of not writing exams, seeing as how trees have to give their lives needlessly for the production of paper, just to have some student scribble on it. She also pointed out that Scarborough is a "separate entity and is not tied to St. George", and that many additional students would graduate as a result of the change.

One professor said that she had taken a poll in one of her classes, and the majority of the students were in favour of starting a week before ending.

The most disappointing part of the meeting was the fact that the snack-bar had just run out of honey-buns. There were about 30 people present, including 8 students, all of whom were very hungry.

HAS THE FINANCIAL POST GOT A BOOK FOR YOU KIDS!

WINNIPEG (CUP) If you're into getting around labour laws or making your kickbacks tax-deductible, has the Financial Post got a book for you!

The Financial Post is the Canadian financial community's weekly guide to who's doing what in business, and where the smart money is going.

Recently it mailed an advertisement to its readers plugging The Business Book of Knowledge. The mailout summarized some of the things readers could learn from the volume, including:

--20 ways to prove an employee is ineligible to receive over time pay
--legal ways to pay less than the minimum wage
--four ways to get out of an "ironclad" lease
--when kickbacks are tax-deductible
--14 ways accountants can make failing companies look good
--how business owners can defer taxes on up to half of their income Sales are expected to be brisk.

REPORT FROM THE SCSC VICE-PRESIDENT

By Kevin Shawn Sealey

It is, I feel, one of the purposes of a student council to adequately utilize the funds granted to it for the benefit of the student body. With this thought in mind, I have been entertaining suggestions by students on how SCSC might b ring more services to students. One student suggested that a microwave oven be set up in a convenient location so that students who bring their lunches can heat them up. Before considering this task, SCSC would first have to know how many students would find this service beneficial. Therefore, a petition will be placed at the SOAP desk near the entrance to the new library. If you feel that a microwave oven is a good idea, please sign the petition.

It has also been brought to my attention that the service in the SCSC copy room may not be up to par in that either the copies are less adequate or the employee in the room is discourteous. Only if problems are brought to the attention of SCSC can they be solved. I would appreciate feedback on the above points and any other suggestions you might have. These can be directed either to Balcony Square or placed in my mailbox in the SCSC office.

Darkroom Tries Takeover

By Evan. L. Brownst

In an unexpected display of force, the Darkroom tried to take over the Radio Station. Severe casualties were reported on both sides, in the fierce battle. The fight ended with the Darkroom having scored a major victory: the annexation of the Studio 2. The only comment from the Darkroom Manager was "Today the studio, tomorrow the world".

Shortly before noon, yesterday, the CJS Radio Intelligence (CJSRI) detected a buildup of heavily armed troops on the Station's northern flank. Before a Public Service Announcement (PSA) to this effect could be aired, the attack had begun. Darkroom staff and sympathisers, armed with masking tape, squirt bottles, and water-bombs had already taken the Station Manager hostage. The Assistant Manager, determined not to let the Station down, broke out the arsenal of H-Wing Caf sandwiches and musturd packets.

For almost four hours, there was no conclusive edge on either side. Health Services is said to have treated 40 for sandwich burns. A few moments after 4:30, in an act of conscience, certain D.J.s defected to the Darkroom, realizing that Pentax was stronger than Polydor.

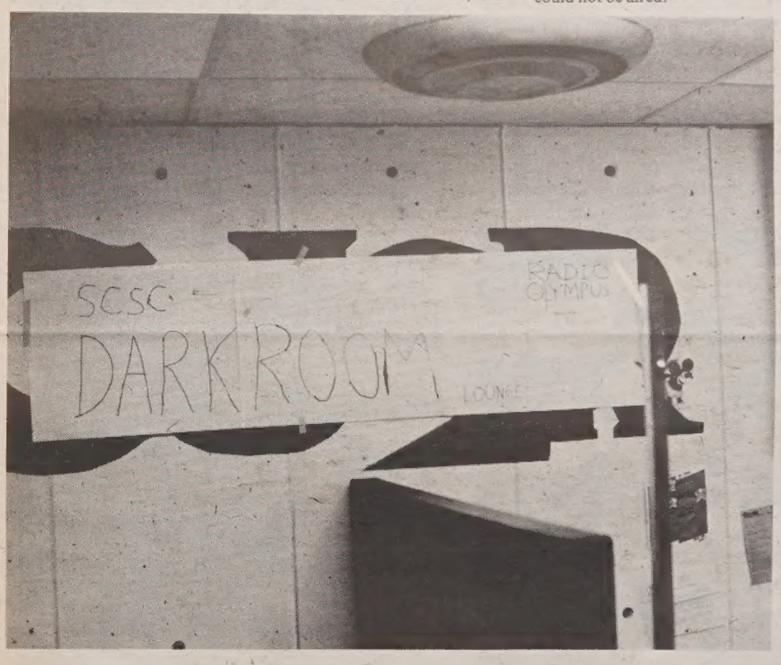
In a statement issued by the Darkroom, the Radio Station was threatened with obliteration, and was warned that the captive, the Station Manager would suffer the horrible and gruesome Kodak Photoflo torture, if no surrender was forthcoming.

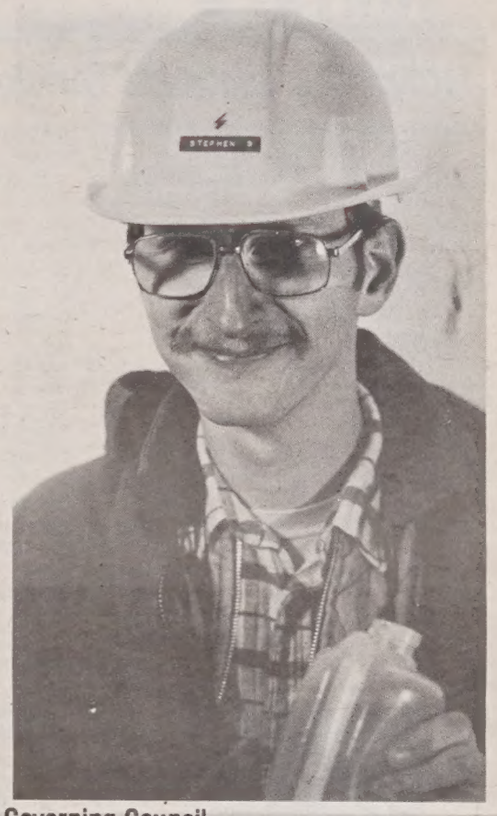
Some five minutes later, the Radio Station surrendered to Darkroom officials. The conditions of surrender were (a) release of the Station manager, and (b) forfeiture of the Studio 2 (now called Darkroom 2). The station hastily agreed.

The ceasefire has proceeded since yesterday, almost without a hitch. It is, of course, being monitored by SCSC and Balcony Square peace-keeping troops.

The only disturbance occurred when the released Station Manager attempted to reclaim Studio 2. It was, of course, to no avail.

Members of the college are invited to visit the original Darkroom and the new Darkroom facilities by the Darkroom Staff. The Radio Station Manager's comments could not be aired.





Governing Council Opts For Pool

The January 30 meeting of the governing council has finally acted on complaints from Scarborough students to the proposed closing of the Scarborough College Library. The new library will be sold to SAC (as earlier reported). Rather than inconvenience students, since they won't know where to go, the council has decided to flood the old library to create a pool for the college's interfac waterpolo squad. The administration offices will be provided with buckets to catch the leaking water.

Heavenly Bods

...AND SHE SAID "I want your body, you gorgeous hunk of man." To which Bootes replied "Get back you water carrier, or I'll set the most dangerous of beasts on you, Canis Major, with his cold blue eyes." "NO! NO!, not the hunting dog." cried Aquarius. "Yes and his side kick Canis Minor." (He's under 19)

All the time, Aquarius was spilling water out of her jugs, which was flowing down to the Eridanus, from which the killer fishes Pisces were escaping from Neptune's domain by way of Your anus. But somewhere in the northern brances of Eridanus Ursa Major was teaching ursa miner how to fish, when the killer fishes came along and attacked the miner, who tried to hit him with his little dipper, but was getting nowhere with them. Along came the Major and said "Do it this way, Lieutenant!", and he scooped up some earth from Pluto with his BIG DIPPER and dammed the stream that Aquarius had caused, and killed the fishes with the club he borrowed from Orion.

Ursa Major and ursa miner both sat down and had fish for dinner, when along came Cancer to tell them that a boat would be leaving soon for the underworld and that they should be on it because Pluto had made their reservations. As they were sailing along Vela came loose and Captain Charon ordered the crew to "fix that Vela", but before they could do anything a storm came up out of nowhere and washed the Major and the miner overboard only to be swallowed by Cetus.

After some time, one lunar month to be exact, the whale brought them up (along with lunch) near Hyades. Luckily for them the Seven Sisters rescued them and brought them to Jupiter, where they had to explain themselves. They were interrupted when Lepus went running across the Mensa chased by Sagittarius, who shot Sagitta at the hare. He missed and got Cygnus, who fell out of the sky, landed on Bootes, killing him. This didn't help Aquarius any, because Canis Major and minor were still chasing her. Luckily, she ran by Hyades where Taurus was visiting the Seven Sisters. He charged the Dogs and got Canis Major in the Chest so he was Siriusly hurt, and the minor got it in the Procyon.

And to this day nobody seems to know what happened with the BIG and little dippers. My guess is that they were thrown up in to the sky when Lepus ran across the Mensa.

University Students Stricken By Strange Disease

Balcony Square had the opportunity to talk to leading medical practioner, Carl von Looney, of the Weinberg Institute of Technology. Von Looney made headlines in Europe and America with his theory on "Malais universtitis", a disease which he says affects 9 out of 10 university students.

B.S.: Mr. von Looney... von Looney: Call me Carl.
B.S.: Mr. Carl...
von Looney: No, no mister, just plain Carl.
B.S.: Just plain Carl...
von Looney: (sigh)
B.S.: ...can you tell us when you first discovered this particular disease?
von Looney: Well, it happened one day in class when one of my students stood up and asked if anyone understood what I was talking about and what exactly the relevance of Micro-Dysentry was. The student incited the others to riot and I was lucky to leave the classroom alive. It was only later in my office talking with the few students who he could not incite that the idea to study this phenomenon came to mind.

B.S.: So, in actual fact, the investigation into this disease was started by the students themselves.
von Lonney: That is correct.
B.S.: What was the next step?
von Looney: I then contacted some of my colleagues around the world and we exchanged data concerning this phenomenon. But it was not until 1981, when a British colleague contacted me conderning the Blackpool riots that I had proof that the disease actually existed and was not just a part of my twisted sense of humour trying to find a way to explain the riotous behaviour of my students.
B.S.: What exactly did your British colleague fine out?
von Looney: He was researching the anthropological resemblances between Neanderthal man and arrested subjects. H e found that there was little difference between the thought processes of, lets say, the cave men and the present-day clubber. When he cross-examined their backgrounds, he found some astounding results. Most of the young rioters were from good, that is upper-middle and upper class families and had at least two years in an institution of higher learning.
B.S.: What did that mean to you in terms of your own research?
von Looney: This gave my own research some direction. I then looked for research subjects of the sixties. As you recall, that was one of the most turbulent of the university eras.
B.S.: Where did you find these people?
von Looney: Most of them were found in a tent just outside of Burlington. I traded them legal protection for information, just after the police raided their so-called "Swingers Club." I found out that most of the swinging couples were flower children gone middle-age. After I had correlated that data, I went after the main event: the present day university students.
B.S.: Where did you find your research group?
von Looney: Students were chosen from all over the Western world. I had to be careful not to include those students of Asian or Slavic origin since there are roo many ideological differences to take into account in the sample.

Therefore, the sample included British, Western European, and American (both Canada and the U.S.).
B.S.: How was the test set up?
von Loonet: The students selected were put through a series fo test to check aptitude, strain-endurance and pain-reflexes. Those stilll alive after the tests were put into the test group. The others were the control group and were sent home to their families. The test group was then put through even harder tests: arithmetic and spelling. During this period of time there were two suicides. Unfortunate things, I guess they just couldn't take the strain.
B.S.: Where were these tests taking place?
von Looney: Those tests performed before death took place in my private chateau in the Swiss Alps, Chateau des Maudites.
B.S.: Wouldn't it have been wiser to study them in a laboratory atmosphere, perhaps in some university?
van Looney: It was during this time that I was having problems with the W.I.T. administration. They had learned that one of the tests I was to use was to tie students up by their eyelids and make them blink. A simple co-ordination test. Those softies felt that I was being unfairly and unjustly cruel and wouldn't permit me any laboratory space. So I went to my chateau in Switzerland with my trusty lab assistant Igor to set up my own laboratory.
B.S.: You said that those tests performed before death took place in your Swiss chateau. Where did you perform the post-death tests and where did you get your subjects?
von Looney: Those tests were done at the W.I.T. You see, the administrators were upset about me testing live subjects but weren't at all perturbed about testing dead subjects. Most of the test subjects were dug up around the university itself.
B.S.: Dug up? Do you dean to tell me that you grave-robbed?
von Looney: (angrily) I, we, did not grave-rob! We simply borrowed them. After all, it was for the greater glory of science! We put them all back, well most of them, after we had finished.

B.S.: Back to the disease, doctor. Can you tell me what teh symptoms are? How do you know if your friend or if even you have the disease?
von Looney: The disease exists in three principle steps, the last being irreparable and irreversible. At first the student becomes overly interested in music and hi-fi equipment. (fig. 1) Stereos, tape decks, loud speakers and amplifiers seem to fascinate him/her. They can frequently be seen walking around with Sony Walkmans, going to class with electronic calculators, first with batteries, then with paper readouts, then six-inch t.v.'s sitting in carrels in hallways waiting for classes to end, plugging headphones into coffee pots, writing with pens with little flashlights built into them, buying two cassete decks for their Dodge Aspens, one for the car and one for their seat to keep it company when they're in the car, standing underneath the speaker in the Meeting Place absorbed by the sound of static

DISCS, DIALS, & DREK

By Bill Smith

Stars Not On: Chipmunks on 78 Plus...(Radium 54321)

An amazing creation. This is one record no one will be able t o play. The creation, from new Belgian group, Stars Not On, goes so quickly by the ear that no one can hear it. All you hear is a bit of a hum. Hey, play this with "Flight of the Bumblebee" and you may create a fad. If you slow it down, you'll merely find the sounds of real chipmunks making love. ★★★

AC/DC with OZZY OSBOURNE and DAVID LEE ROTH: Easy Listening Classics (Airsickness SP001)

If you've ever wondered what oldies like "Rose Marie", "Love Is A Many Splendered Thing", "Goodnight Irene", and others sound like done up with blazing guitars and an every-third-verse scream by Roth, this is it. Especially effective are Osbourne and AC/DC doing "The Way We Were" and "Feelings". ★★½

Kate Smith and Tiny Tim : We Were Meant To Be Together (Joint MRJA 999)

This is what happens when two tapes got spliced together of "Tiptoe Through The Tulips". The voices are indistinguishable. This trash is even worse than expected although the duets of "The Way We Were" and "Feelings" are effective. ★

VARIOUS ARTISTS: Soundtrack of Your Favourite Horror Movies (SKREEM HELP 1111)

This isn't really music; what it is are those magnificent sounds you hear in horror movies like chainsaws, knife swooshes, and other sordid items. For the person who makes a habit of throwing up -- no rating. Note: The finale of "Feelings" is not for the squeamish!!

Robert Plant/Sal Solo: Ice Cream (Quack VI 420)

This is one record, with each artist comprising one side. Led Zep's Plant gives us his famous screams on one side, while New Romanticist Sal Solo (of Classix Nouveaux) gives us his rendition on side two. Something gets lost in the translation from Plant to Solo. ★★

ADAM AND THE ANTS/SPANDAU BALLET: Victims of Style (Cute EP473)

This extended play features four songs, 2 by each band. "Ant Fashion" is moaning over a set of double drums, with fashion show music thrown in; "The Magnificent I" is Adam doing a rap about why he dresses the way he does; Spandau Ballet's "Why We Aren't Called Spandex" is a bit silly; and "Lifting Weights" shows how you can go too far and turn into a monster. Bizarre, but likeable. ★★★

Lionel Richie: Greatest Hits by Kenny Rogers (Toll EP 900)

This is only an extended play featuring all those nice ballads Lionel Richie produced for Kenny Rogers. Next thing you know we'll see "The Lionel Richie Album", with Rogers doing the singing and not getting the credit. ★★

Any of the above situations are entirely hypothetical, and resemblance to any persons real or fictitious is purely self-explanatory.

HOOKED ON "NAUSEA" (Exist 4531)

Yes folks, they've done it. Richard Burton reads Jean-Paul Sartre's "Nausea" set to a disco beat. This, of course, is edited down quite a bit to fit 40 or 50 minutes worth of time. If you can take it, it will fill the gap between being and nothingness. ★★★

Major Scientific Discoveries Put Scarborough In Limelight

By Stephen Brown

Scarborough College 1st year labs have once more put U of T in the forefront of the Scientific community. Major breakthroughs have been made in the disciplines of physics, astronomy, mathematics, food studies, and janitorial services.

Dr. Hunsen Bunnydew, research and development (R & D) coordinator, comments "TRI★0.5E0 plus (B-A)★FMID★0.5E0; Call QUAD(FCN,A,MID,FA, FMID);". Some of the more salient advances are: Discovery of 2 new subatomic particles. The Pasta particle, and its corresponding anti-particle, Antipasta. They have been described as having no mass, no spin, but a lot of strangeness. Both have been recreated at Fermilab, MIT, and other well-equipped kitchens.

-The addition of a new letter to the greek alphabet. The math and physics departments have been complaining about running out of variable names (due to cuts in government funding), so a new letter of the alphabet has been postulated. From this time forth, the letter "pizza" follows the previously final letter omega. It is to be used only in equations with double cheese.

-Pictures of the life forms on Uranus. Clusters of thin and wiry creatures, on the planet Uranus have been spotted, with the Scarborough 60" diffuser telescope. The name given to these creatures is "Uranus hares". It has been speculated that the bulbous growth at the base of most hares is a form of mineral found on Uranus, called willnot.

-The clinical evidence necessary to conclude that flatulence is genetically controlled.

-Invention of the Iludrium Q-36 Explosive space Modulator. This thing is designed to blow up the planet Mars, which obstructs our view of the planet Neptune, which we are more interested in.

Additional information or these immensely important developments as they become available.

Nude Photography

By Stephen Brown

Nude photography is not for every amateur or professional. Expecially in the case of the timid or shy photographer, working without clothes can be rather distracting. However, determination triumphs. As it has been wisely put, "it may be long, and it may be hard, but there is no withdrawal". In other words, anyone can give it a try with a moderate degree of success.

The Karmann Gia report (1969) conclusively showed that photographers who displayed their bare necessities at work were generally happier and less socially inhibited, but had a somewhat higher incidence of V.D. (as did their subjects, mysteriously).

For those adventurous Nikonophiles, Olympusomaniacs, and Canonphobes around the college, I have a few tips, from my extensive experience.

Temperature is most important. A shivering photographer (a) produces blurry pictures, and (b) can signal the subject that the photographic session is prematurely over, and that payment is due.

Caution must be exercized in handling the equipment, photographic and other. The classic example is what happens when, while a camera is being loaded with film at waist level, inadvertantly slams shut. One accident, and its all over.

Supplementary lighting may be necessary, but flashing is redundant.

Occasionally, ones subject is bored, and disinterested. In this situation, use your imagination, and make due with what you have. Such lines as "watch the birdie", "say cheese", and "look at what I have here" are generally effective. For those hard to satisfy subjects you may have to resort to such innocent remarks as "are you hungry?", or "aren't you feeling (like) yourself?" to get the desired effect.

Finding a good place for this terribly specialized type of photography can be difficult. The criteria are lack of disturbances and subdued lighting. Plan on 15 to 30 minutes per session. Be sure to collect payment as soon as possible after the session, as overdue accounts make unwanted paperwork.

If you remember to keep your mind on the subject, and not on yourself, you may find nude photography an exhilirating experience.

Whether you plan to try nude photography, or just to dream about it, the related possibilities are endless, limited only by your imagination.

You Can't Take It With You

on CJS-Radio, joining the Photography Club just so they can go into the darkroom and listen to illicit tapes of Rod Stewart and Mellisa Manchester, going to SAC Free Films to watch the dust swirling through the light from the projector, dialling nine on the free phone in order to hear the dial tone from the outside world, singing the Pizza Pizza phone number in the shower, inviting a girl/boy out to the kitchen to watch the fridge light go on and off when they open and close the door. All these are warning signs that should be paid attention to.

The second stage is a relatively quiet one. The afflicted person seems to lead a happy life because they go around with a happy smile on their face. This is the type of person who will wish you good-day-eh on Monday morning. Being in such a serene state of mind, they tend to be clowns of the class, imitating professors or entertainment figures (fig. 2), checking their navels for lint three or four times a day, taking an inordinate number of showers (7 in a week), brushing their teeth after they eat, using toothpicks for reasons other than building fortresses, using chopsticks in Chinese or Japanese restaurants, placing a napkin on the knee instead of under the chin, preferring corks to screwcaps on wine bottles, laughing at Bob and Doug, forgetting to write essays and then filing petitions, playing video games until all hours in the pub, wearing their underwear inside-out, wearing their socks on the wrong feet, hanging Garfield posters on their walls and ordering pizza every Sunday.

Once the student has passed this second stage and is into the third one, there is no going back. They have developed what is termed "Malais universititis grotis terminus". There is no known cure for this disease and only graduation with a 15 or 20 credit B.A. is known to help. The syptoms are perhaps the most dangerous of the disease since it involves a physical sport. It is at this stage that the student develops a passion for hockey. But not for its fast paced movement, but for its violence, potential or otherwise. In other words, the student is under the delusion of being Mike Palmateer or Ken Dryden, a goalie. (fig. 3) He/she likes having hard rubber objects thrown at his/her head, and the noise of the crowd when they make a save, the sound of the wind as the puck rushes by, the smell of sweaty young players as they crunch into the net, the glare of the ice reflecting the lights, the joy of side-swiping a foreward when the referee isn't looking, the pinch of an over-tight skate, the pins-and-needles feeling in their head when a puck catches them unawares, the smoothness of their goalie stick, and the salty-sweet taste of fresh blood.

If by this time the student hasn't more than 12 credits, then there is nothing that can help them.

von Looney: Thats right, they get "The Smarts".

B.S.: A fate worse than death.

UTR, the SAC owned radio station announced this week that they plan to modify the proposed referendum. Instead of collecting $3.25 from each student they want $100.00.

In a press conference, John Boudreau, manager of UTR, explained this change. The original proposal would only allow them to re-equip the present station. The multi-million dollar budget generated by the new proposal would enable them to purchase an existing major Toronto station. (rumours mention CFTR) Boudreau figures that this would save much time and effort on the part of the staff and that they might be able to get free Argo tickets out of it.

When asked how this would benefit the students Boudreau replied "What do they matter? All we want is for UTR to be taken seriously for a change."

FIGHT THAT TICKET

Do you know what you may be able to do if you are handed a traffic ticket?

A free programme, sponsored by Community Legal Education Ontario, will give answers on all aspects of highway traffic law. Lawyer Fremont Brown will give the talk on Thursday, February 11, 8:30 p.m. at the Cedarbrae District Libary, 545 Markham Road, a short block south of Lawrence Avenue East.

Brown will give advice on what your rights are, what the procedure is, and, most important, what defences are acceptable. Should you plead guilty? Can you give an explanation and receive a lighter sentence? He'll also cover car ownership and insurance, responsibilities of owning a car and courtroom procedure. A question and answer period will follow the talk.

Come and learn about the process of the administration of the Traffic Act.

'B' Boys Down Leafs

Dateline: Harold's Haven (Maple Leaf Gardens) Friday, Jan. 29, the Scarborough Men's 'B' ice hockey team defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs 14-2 in the annual exhibition contest waged between the two clubs. The 15,000 fans were behind the Scarberians all the way in this contest.

Though somewhat apprehensive during the first few minutes of play, the Maroons soon began to skate circles around the listless Leafs. At 3:02 of the first frame Scarborough's Ghent "the Bullet" Rose potted a major. Three minutes later Dan "Crusher" Dolorey decked Leaf Rick Vaive and received two for the charge. Vaive is recovering well from his fractured leg, bruised elbow and blackened eye. The Leafs were unable to take advantage of the opportunity.

With Delory out of the box, the fierce Scarberian offence once again took to the ice. Captain Chris Easton broke a three game scoreless streak with his first of three at the 7:54 mark. Easton tipped a Chris "rot-gut" Machin point shot beyond the grasp of Bunny Larocque. The offence was cut short as Terry Martin took a centering pass from Bob Manno to break Scarborough's Mark Gylys' shut-out. Scarborough ended the first frame with a major at the 19:52 mark. Jim "Stumbles" Stoddart laced a stick side drive through the Leaf defences.

The second period was a decisive turning point in the contest. Rick "wooblie" Wiebe rushed up the ice to count for a single at the 45 second mark. Randy "loonie tunes" Goudie advanced up the ice, only to be stopped short by Borje Salming at the blue line. Goudie retaliated to the bone jarring check and was given a ten minute misconduct for his abusive language directed towards the officials.

With Goudie in the box, the Leafs managed to pull together their resources. John Anderson crossed the blue line with a nice side step of Scarberian defenceman Brad "golden" Orr. With Bill Derlago acting as a decoy, Anderson fired one to the short side of Gylys, picked up the rebound and flipped a high one over the fallen Gylys to pick the top corner. This was, however, the last offensive drive that the Leafs were able to muster.

The tiring Leafs were not able to keep up with the young and virile legs of the Scarberians. Chris "I don't need practice" Pechenkov headed a drive up the ice, skating through the entire Leaf defence. As he approached the undefended Larocque, he faked to the stick side and pulled quickly to the left. The nimble Larocque mananged to stop the puck but Rick "Fuzzy" Wagner was right on top of the play to score an easy goal.

With Bruce "killer" Collict off for two minutes for intentionally decapitating an official, the short handed Scarberians managed to intercept a Leaf forwarding pass. James "Time Warp" Doma took the puck at centre ice and sped across the line and fired one cleanly to the glove side.

At this point Leaf owner Harold Ballard ordered coach Mike Nykoluk to pull Larocque. Nykoluk protested violently as he did not dress a backup netminder for this exhibiton game. Ballard was furious, and immediately dressed himself in the pads of Larocque. Fortunately for the Leafs, the period ended before Ballard could take to the ice

The third period began with Ballard threatening to trade his entire club for a Reggie Jackson baseball card. (There were no takers) With Ballard between the pipes, the Leafs hopes for a comeback chance faded quickly. The whole period was mass confusion as Scarberian goals occured faster than the timekeepers were able to record them. At the end of the twenty minutes, Harold Ballard was calling for the return of Sittler. The 15,000 jubilant fans were held back from the Scarborough "B team by members of Toronto's Emergency Task Force. Anyone with missing loved ones known to have gone to the game are asled to call 967-2222.

Scarborough To Build Metrodome

By Comrade Babushnekov

The athletic department of the Scarborough College has announced that they will begin construction of a forty million dollar superdome in the spring of this year. The 150,000 seat stadium will be constructed n the valley on the current site of the field house.

Tiamo Planndi, athletics director, said that funding for the project will come entirely out of the Scarborough College Athletic Associations' (SCAA) coffers. SCAA president Paul Micholic was less than co-operative with this reporter when he was asked as to where the forty million dollars would come from. 'Never you mind where we get the money from, that is not important.' Mickolic emphasized the shot in the arm to local contractors and businessmen that the construction represents.

"The new facility will be used by Toronto's best football teams; the U of T Blues and their chief farm club the Scarborough Maroons." added Mickolic. The stadium willk also house a 30,000 square foot weight training room, a 500 metre swimming pool and 250 billliards tables, all for the exclusive use of the football players.

LATE BREAKING NEWS

The Balcony Square has learned that twenty-five per cent of the Superdome's construction costs will come from the profits of the Feb. 16 Ski Bash. The revelation was made at Friday's press conference where it was announced that the $18.00 fee for the Ski Bash has been increased to $575.00 per person.
